Jungle Patta in West Bengal

Empirical evidences find that legal provisions meant for protecting the rights of the forest-dwellers over forest resources are deemed to be politically motivated beneficiary schemes for patta distribution. page 32

Rainwater Harvesting in Delhi

In a top-down ecosystem of water resource management, political interests of city officials determine the efficiency of rainwater harvesting sites, rather than household-level initiatives. page 41

CURRENT STATISTICS

POSTSCRIPT

An Expansive Vision of Economics

It is important to know whether the current slowdown in investments is a result of a shortage of demand for goods, or a shortage of credit on the supply-side, or both. page 11

Laboratory Trials to Farms

A look at the results of a multidisciplinary, multi-country, collaborative project aimed at reducing pre- and post-harvest fruit losses and addressing economic security of the farmers page 36

Seasonal Migration in Maharashtra

A study of the migration of marginal peasant households in Beed district to other parts of Maharashtra shows that it is caused by social relations of dependency, indebtedness, and ecological decline. page 30

How to Study Business History

Business history must think out a new conceptual framework for itself and delve into a critical understanding of management and organisation, the evolving history of capitalism, and causation within a historical context. page 19

Understanding Urban Sanitation

An ethnographic study in two small towns in Odisha tries to analyse the sociocultural norms and practices that influence toilet behaviour. page 51
